Dear Carol:

I have enclosed a copy of a letter and resume Bob Gray sent to John Herrington concerning a nominee for a possible advisory committee which may be appointed in relation to the National Center for the Analysis of Violent Crime. Bob has sent similar correspondence to the appropriate officials at FBI.

If you or your staff could point us in the right direction with this project, I would appreciate it deeply.

I have had several conversations with Bill Espey and thoroughly enjoy the opportunity to keep up with the Texans. I hope that I was helpful to Bill.

By the way, during the convention we will host a reception in honor of [REDACTED] on Tuesday evening after the convention closes. Nothing fancy. Just a chance to get a number of [REDACTED] supporters together for a few drinks. We will send you an invitation in the event you are in town at that time.

Hope to see you soon. If I can assist you in any way, please let me know.

Sincerely,

Dear John:

Like millions of other Americans I am frustrated by the alarming increase in violent crimes and was pleased to learn recently of the formation of the National Center for the Analysis of Violent Crime.

I have had the opportunity recently to work with a gentleman from California who, like President Reagan, has devoted much of his time to seeking solutions to persistent problems in our criminal justice system.

[redacted] approaches criminal justice problems and reforms from a unique perspective: he is not an attorney. For the past 15 years, [redacted]

b6

[redacted] has donated countless hours to instructing principles of stock market investment to inmates at Federal and State institutions throughout the country.

[redacted] has expanded his program to include an array of guest speakers including former First Lady Betty Ford, Maureen Reagan, and attorney [redacted]. This program has evolved into a successful rehabilitation effort widely accepted and acclaimed by both correctional authorities, prisoners, and national opinion leaders.

b6

In addition to his rehabilitation work in prison systems, [redacted] has taken an active role in numerous charitable organizations such as SHARE, a charity for children with learning disabilities.

[redacted] also finds time to participate in Republican Party activities in California. In 1984 he became a Republican Eagle, and plans to take an active role in the President's reelection efforts.

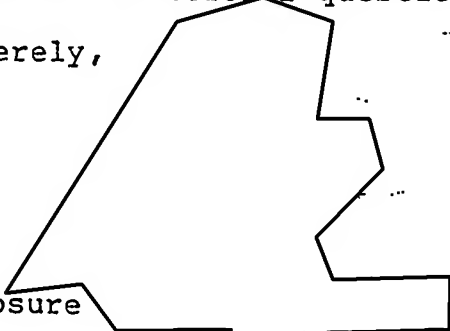

Mr. John Herrington

With his unique blend of a businessman's perspective and an acquired expertise in criminology, I am convinced [redacted] would be a tremendous addition to the advisory panel for the National Center for Analysis of Violent Crime. I have enclosed background information on [redacted] and would be pleased to answer additional questions if needed.

Dear [redacted]

Thank you for the copy of the letter and resume Bob Gray sent to John Herrington regarding the nomination of [redacted] as a possible member of the Advisory Committee of the National Center for the Analysis of Violent Crime. Enclosed is a copy of a letter received by the Behavioral Science Unit of the FBI Academy and the response by Unit Chief [redacted] for your information.

The National Center for the Analysis of Violent Crime is being managed by the FBI. It is a compilation of a variety of innovations being developed in the law enforcement community by a working group which recommended that the National Center be managed by the FBI and located at the FBI Academy.

This working group consists of an academic expert in the criminal justice field and various state, county, and local law enforcement practitioners who continue to assist members of the FBI Academy's Behavioral Science Unit in ensuring that the National Center is responsive to state, county, and local needs.

We expect that the Center's Advisory Board will be formed in the next month or two, and that it will draw from and expand the working group. At that time, we will keep [redacted] in mind.

Again I appreciate your interest, and thank you for your letter.

Sincerely yours,
